A Living Trust is a document that allows individual (s), or 'Grantor', to place their assets to the benefit of someone else at their death or incapacitation. Unlike a Will, a Trust does not go through the probate process with the court. Therefore, the person that is selected as the Successor Trustee will oversee that all the property in the Trust will transfer to the Beneficiary at the time of the Grantor's death (the Beneficiary and the Successor Trustee are often the same person).

Trusts explained | Legal & General

A trust agreement creates a trust by defining the parameters of the relationship. Its essential parts are identification of the grantor, trustee (s) and beneficiaries, the purpose of the trust, the powers of the trustee (s), and the rights of the grantor and beneficiaries. The trust agreement directs how the trustee (s) should manage and disburse assets and how and when the grantor can amend or revoke the trust.

However, papers for Hampshire Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust's board of directors' meeting suggest that it has already decided on a "preferred way forward" on spending the funding, which is part of a package worth £3.7 billion from the government for 40 hospitals in England. Reference is also made to "demolition" and "securing land", possibly identifying the way the trust would like to use the funds.
